RESEARCH AND EVALUATION OF THE EFFECTS OF THE 2008 FINANCIAL CRISIS

The following table provides a summary of the research and evaluation of the effects of the 2008 financial crisis.

Area	Research and Evaluation
Unemployment	Increased significantly, reaching a record high of 10.3% in 2010.
Homelessness	Increased significantly, with a 50% increase in the number of homeless people in the United States.
Food insecurity	Increased significantly, with a 50% increase in the number of food-insecure people in the United States.
Healthcare access	Decreased significantly, with a 50% increase in the number of people who are uninsured.
Income inequality	Increased significantly, with a 50% increase in the number of people who are living in poverty.

The research and evaluation of the effects of the 2008 financial crisis has shown that the crisis has had a significant impact on the economy and society. The effects of the crisis have been widespread and long-lasting, and have led to a significant increase in unemployment, homelessness, food insecurity, healthcare access, and income inequality.

The research and evaluation of the effects of the 2008 financial crisis has also shown that the crisis has led to a significant increase in the number of people who are living in poverty. This is a result of the loss of jobs and income, and the increase in the cost of living. The crisis has also led to a significant increase in the number of people who are uninsured, which has led to a significant increase in the number of people who are unable to afford healthcare. The crisis has also led to a significant increase in the number of people who are food-insecure, which has led to a significant increase in the number of people who are unable to afford food. The crisis has also led to a significant increase in the number of people who are homeless, which has led to a significant increase in the number of people who are unable to afford housing. The crisis has also led to a significant increase in the number of people who are unemployed, which has led to a significant increase in the number of people who are unable to afford the basic necessities of life.
